Castleton, VT (CNV)

Erected in 1850, the Castleton depot is one of the oldest station buildings in the national Amtrak network. Passenger service had ceased in the 1940s and the building was rehabilitated in 2005. Amtrak service to Castleton began in 2010, when the nearby Fair Haven stop—consisting of a modest shelter structure—was closed. The station is under private ownership and also houses a bakery-deli. The station serves the state-supported Ethan Allen Express route. In 2015, 4,587 passengers passed through the station and provided revenue valued at $288,505.

* Value Added - enhancement a company or business gives its product or service before providing it to customers (value of the final outputs from Amtrak minus the value of the inputs such as raw materials).
 Local riders are defined as riders that boarded or alighted an Amtrak train in the state. May include out of state passengers transferring trains in the state.
 Rail Passenger Mile - passenger rail miles are determined by multiplying the total number of passengers by the total number of miles traveled.
Vermont is served by 2 train routes and 11 stations. Two of the stations are along the Ethan Allen Express route: Rutland and Castleton; nine are along the Vermonter route: St. Albans, Essex Junction, Waterbury, Montpelier, Randolph, White River Junction, Windsor, Bellows Falls, and Brattleboro. Essex Junction is the state’s busiest station, followed by Brattleboro. Both the Ethan Allen and the Vermonter receive state support.

Despite having basically no population growth, ridership in Vermont is up 25 percent over the past six years, underscoring the popularity of Amtrak’s services in the state. Nine of every 10 residents (91 percent) lives within 30 miles of an Amtrak station.

Among Amtrak riders in the state, 9 percent report that they would not have made the trip but for the availability of Amtrak service. The service provides important mobility and access needs for a number of residents. Moreover, the service is used by the full spectrum of income groups across the state’s population.

Amtrak purchased over $1.1 million in goods and services from Vermont’s economy in FY15.
